His language in the presence of men and women has at times not only been coarse Government positions. Thousands of but vulgar. MANY WITNESSES CALLED BEFORE THE GRAND JURY.

A Final Report May Be Submitted To Morrow-Cases of Interest in the County Courts.

Councilman Bernauer was the last wit ness to testify before the grand jury yesterday evening. The councilman was called by Prosecutor Pugh by telephone. What Information he has on the Higgins case is not known, but the fact of his having been called by the prosecutor substantiates the theory that he was not wanted for anything relating to himself. He had signified his willingness to testify voluntarily, should the grand jury attempt to investigate him, as the public was at first led to believe. He could not have been called had such investigation been pend-

Prosecutor Pugh has several witnesses subpoenaed for to-morrow morning and was unable to say last night whether or not the grand jury will complete the investigation so that a report can be submitted to Judge Alford, of the Criminal Court, to-morrow. It is said that the investigation is going beyond the delving into alleged financial crookedness and that the pass question is also undergoing the scrutiny of the prosecutor and executive body. This is said to reach other councilmen besides Higgins. The number of railroad officials called to testify before the jury partly confirms this report, although the Council has taken official action on many improvements made by these companies. It is also charged that certain members of the Council and city officials are riding on street-car passes. The extent of this investigation cannot learned, but Prosecutor Pugh says it will not likely open up the old investigation concerning the letting of the franchise to the company.

No partial report of the special session is to be made. Prosecutor Pugh says, in presented while the investigation continues. should evidence be secured against other members of the Council. He says it will be a final report when submitted. It is evident that Higgins expects to be indicted since he wanted to give bond in advance. Judge Alford said in case an indictment is returned against Higgins, he will not be tried before the election, but immediately afterward, in order that no charges of political blas can be made against the court. Higgins was not seen about the grand jury room or Criminal Court yesterday.

F. W. A. Davis, of the Indianapolis Water Company, was the first witness examined yesterday. He denied that he had been approached by Higgins or any other councilman, but his testimony related to the negotiations the water company has had before the Council and the new water contract that has been submitted. Charles Stuckmeyer, who recently secured a franchise for placing waste paper boxes on the street corners, was another witness before the jury. He said no councilmen had approached him. Councilman Billingsly was called, but he said he did not know what the grand jury wanted with him, as he had never been associated with Higgins in any way. Justus C. Adams, of the Sheridan Brick Company, was before the grand jury. His testimony is supposed to relate to the letting of a permit for the company to build a switch. Adams says he used no unfair means in getting the permit. George Williams was also before the grand jury to testify regarding the report that an at tempt was made to get money from the Williams Soap Company. William Williams is the man most desired by Prosecutor Pugh, but he is now in Pittsburg, and

George Williams appeared instead. Frank Bird, of the Bird Transfer Company, was before the grand jury a short time. About a year ago an ordinance was passed giving the transfer company exclusive privilege at the Union Station, and his testimony is supposed to have related to that transaction. Other witnesses called before the grand jury were Councilman George Evans, who corroborated the story of Councilman Negley that Higgins tried to extort money from them, claiming they received money from D. M. Parry for their votes on the Parry switch, and George Shaffer, who was formerly councilman from the Seventh ward; Charles Bieler, of the Denison Hotel, I. J. Richardson, James Broden, of the M. O'Connor Company, and I. Sagolowski, a junk dealer, were also called.

VANDALIA CASE RULING.

Against Company for $913,905. Judge Carter, of the Superior Court, yes terday overruled a motion for a new trial in the Vandalia case, and entered judgment against the company for $913,905. The amount the State asked was more than $2,000,000. Judge Carter, in ruling upon the exceptions to the report of Noble C. Butler, master in chancery, held that $745,000 was due the State, which, with interest from the time a settlement was legally demanded, brought the total up to $913,905. to the Supreme Court of Indiana, and if Judge Carter's decision is affirmed, the company will take it to the United States

Suit for Eddie E. Hayden.

Eddie E. Hayden, by his next friend, Nora A. Hayden, yesterday brought suit against the Big Four Company for $5,000 damages. It is asserted that children are in the habit of going to the ice plants on Missouri street, where one of the company's tracks is laid, to get pieces of ice is six years old, and while playing with other children in the vicinity of the ice factories he was run down by a train and thrown thirty-five feet, sustaining permanent injuries, and has been rendered almost deaf. It is alleged he was standing in a path near the tracks used by the public looking at an exhaust steam pipe in the ground, and did not see the engine approaching.

A Settlement Ordered.

Charles E. Pope, receiver of the Indianapolis, Delphi & Chicago Railroad, has been authorized by Judge Baker, of the Federal Court, to adjust a suit against the city of Delphi involving $50,000 in bonds. When the Indianapolis, Delphi & Chicago Rail-road was built the city of Delphi agreed donate $75,000 towards the undertaking. The city issued bonds to the amount $25,000 when the first train was run into Delphi from Monticello. The remaining 50,000 in bonds were issued and turned over to John A. Cartwright as trustee, and he has been holding them for many years.

The Tomlinson Child.

Judge Allen yesterday heard evidence in the petition of the Board of Children's Guardians for the custody of Helen Tomlinson, whose father is contesting the claim. The board claims Tomlinson is not a fit person to have the child. Some time ago Tomlinson took his child away from her grandmother on her way home from school, and the report was circulated that she had been kidnaped

PRISON SUNDAY.

It Will Be Generally Observed in Indiana To-Day.

Prison Sunday will be generally observed throughout the State to-day. Sermons relating to the day will be preached in at least fifty of the churches in Indianapolis. The State Prison Board has sent out over the State more than 600 sets of prison literature, and many more sets have been sent to Chicago, Ohio, Pennsylvania and other places. In many of the cities and towns throughout the State the ministerial associations have been very active in arranging for the observance of the day, and in other places the county boards of charities have been interesting themselves in the work. Special sermons will be preached in Indianapolis to-day at Plymouth Church, Fourth Presbyterian, Tabernacle Church, Central-avenue M. E. Church, Central Christian Church and at many others. Amos W. John Poland, a liveryman living at 42 West Pearl street, while in the act of paying his fare on a North Indianapolis street car, was thrown to the ground at Twenty-first street and Northwestern avenue and instantly killed about 7:30 o'clock last night. Poland had taken a horse to North Indianapolis and returning got on the car, which was crowded, north of Fall creek. Near Twenty-first street there is a sharp turn and when the car struck this curve he was thrown off. Poland had his pocketbook in his hand getting money to pay his fare and was unable to catch hold of anything before he fell. He died almost instantly, it was thought, for his skull was fractured and the spinal column at the base of the skull probably broken. The body lay at the side of the track until the bicycle police and Dispensary doctors arived, when it was removed to the morgue. The whole play was not read, but enough to make it clearly understood and only the portion surrounding the characters, Shylock, Bassanio, Antonio, Portia Nerissa and Jessica. The scene in which Antonio borrows money from the Jew for his friend, Bassanio, and the court scene, where Portia comes to the rescue as the plause. John Wade Thompson Dead.

John Wade Thompson, of 836 Fletcher avenue, died yesterday morning and the funeral will be held from his late residence Monday afternoon, Mr. Thompson was born in Springfield, Ky., in 1820, and came to Indianapolis when but nine years of age. With the exception of a few years since that time, when the family returned to Kentucky, he had resided here continuously. He was a brick contractor and actively engaged in business until about five years ago, when he retired on account of ill health, after which he traveled westward and visited with a daughter in Colorado. He was a charter member of the South street Baptist Church, and for a number of years was a deacon in this church. He leaves a widow and three children, Miss Kate A. His Remarks at Tomlinson Hall Denunciatory of Everything That Bears Republican Stamp.

Charles A. Towne, the reigning spirit in the fusion Populist party, delivered an address two hours in length at Tomlinson Hall last night to a good-sized audience. Mr. Towne's radical assertions aroused cheers and vells. Before the speaking began a number of Democratic clubs came into the hall with a great noise of fife and drum. They had the usual number of small boys with them who became quite enthusiastic. Mr. Towne was introduced by George J. Marott. The audience was not an orderly one and often became quite noisy. The Populistic orator indulged in his usual denunciation of McKinley and Work in Indiana;" in the afternoon to the | Senator Hanna and in order to keep his audience in good spirits became quite up something of a reputation as a come-Comfort, of the Indiana Reformatory, will | dian. For instance a man in the audience cried > retorted Towne, and the crowd yelled with glee. Early in his remarks the orator declared that Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and William J. Bryan belong to the same political party-the party of the people. He asserted that the Republican party has departed from its ancient landmarks. People still spell "Republican" the same way and that is the only resemblance to the old party, the speaker asserted. He declared that on the coinage question the Republican party has changed "from plus to minus." The crowd thought this a fine joke and applauded the joker. Mr. Towne spoke of the Indianapolis sound money convention with the sneer which was ever ready on his face. He referred to what he called the "McKinley-Hanna theory" of protection as a system under which the trusts and combinations use the tariff schedule to beat out the brains of home competition with one hand while they rifle the pockets of the people with the other. The speaker made the bold declaration-and it was greeted with howls of delight-that since McKinley was inaugurated more trusts have been organized than were organized in the whole world from the beginning of the Christian era down to the beginning of McKinley's adminis-

The lucky number was There were 988 tickets sold at fifty cents each. The task of drawing was a tedious one. A committee of five young men did the work. There were two band boxes, one containing duplicates of the tickets sold, and the other an equal number of blank tickets, one bearing the word "prize." The tickets were taken from one box, handed to a member of the committee, who called the number, then gave it to another who repeated it. Then ticket out of the box of blanks was handed the first member of the committee who called "blank" until he reached the prize ticket. A teller recorded each number as it was called. The drawing continued for an hour and ifteen minutes and 563 tickets were taken through this process before the prize was reached. There was much excitement among those present and several times the man with the box of blanks shook it violently in an effort to bring the prize ticket to the surface.

AMUSEMENTS.

Primrose & Dockstader's Minstrels a

George Primrose and Lew Dockstader came to Indianapolis yesterday with large force of assistants and entertained in a highly satisfactory manner two goodsized audiences at English's Opera House. These popular gentlemen undoubtedly give a minstrel entertainment that is high class, although strict candor compels the statement that this season's offering is a few degrees below the standard set last season. Primrose still does soft-shoe dancing to strengthen his right to the title of king in that portion of Terpsichore's domain, and Dockstader releases a number of very clever take-offs on this year's crop of candidates for high office. The fact remains, however, that both men are falling into the deplorable habit that has proven the un-"funny" at times and succeeded in building | doing of so many stars-of resting on past

> Primrose and Dockstader are undeniably great in their spheres, but even greatness will soon droop and wither when the sunlight of popular favor no longer shines upon it. On the programme Dockstader is billed to sing three humorous songs in the "second edition of end men," but in lieu thereof frugally doles out one, "Sech Doin's," and for encores adds a couple of verses of a local tinge, rapping "Commodore" Higgins and Mayor Taggart-the latter on account of his alleged fruitful trip to Tammany Hall's headquarters recently. In the olio Mr. Dockstader gives some comical burlesques of McKinley and Bryan and repeats practically the same speeches he gave last season, with slightly different stage settings. Mr. Primrose, in his fine exhibition of nimbleness and grace in softshoe dancing, relies greatly upon the assistance of several picturesque Southern transformation scenes, with beautiful light effects and a duo of pickaninnies almost as light-footed as himself, to gloss over his own parsimony.

There is a man in the company, Nell O'Brien by name, who seriously threatens to force Dockstader to look to his laurels as a comedian and singer of funny songs. O'Brien's comic coon song, "If I Only Had a Dollar of My Own," was one of the big hits of the minstrel first part, while his indescribably ludicrous antics in his musical sketch in the ollo with Ed Bogert kept the greater part of the audience in uncontrollable paroxysms of merriment for nearly half The setting of the first part is of the bril liant kind that has come to be expected of this organization. The scene portrayed is allegorical, and the effect is greatly heightened by scores of incandescent lights and by the richness of the costumes worn by the members of the company and of Professor Carlton's band and Professor Latham's orchestra. The opening air was "O Listen to the Band," and its effect when played by two musical organizations of exceptional merit was remarkable. A corps of superb vocalists in black face and resplendent suits of buff and black rendered the latest comic songs, pathetic ballads scored the first vocal success with his inimitable rendition of the love ballad "Oh Answer Me," a number that is very likely to become popular wherever heard. Larry Dooley carried the audience by storm with his original song "K-i-s-s," in which he revealed a voice of marvelous power and charm. Charles Kent's singing of "I Can't Tell Why I Love You" was received with enthusiastic applause. Harry Ellis scored heavily with his splendid rendition of the beautiful ballad "When the Harvest Days are Over, Jessie Dear," another of the numbers that will remain after the company takes its departure. In the "second edition of end men" Primrose in the song 'Jes Because You Made dem Goo-goo Eyes" and Dockstader in "Sech Doins' were given a reception that should have induced them to accord an encore consisting of new songs. Frederick Barnes gave a hint of his magnificent bass voice in the chorus of the "first edition," but when he let it out to its fullest extent in the charming song "Asleep in the Deep" the audience manifested its delight in a perfect roar of applause. The first number in the ollo was given by Larry Dooley and Charles Kent, who made good the title of "the De Reszkes of minstrelsy" given them on the programme. After Dockstader's impersonations of presdential candidates Primrose disclosed his latest scenic and terpsichorean surprise. "The Sunny, Sunny South." With the unfolding of the different scenes of rarely surpassed scenic picturesqueness the audience responded warmly. There were three scenes—"Morning, Noon and Night on a Mississippi Bayou," "Morning, Noon and Night in a Tennessee Cotton Field" and an excellent reproduction of a Southern plantation with a darky's cabin in the background. With the coming of full daylight to the last scene Primrose made his appearance clad in garments rather rich for plantation hand and once more danced his way into the hearts of the people. It is a trifle risky for Mr. Primrose to introduce two such clever dancers as he carries this season, for they crowd the star pretty closely at times. The olio came to an end with one of the best acrobatic exhibitions ever seen at English's, furnished by the Carl Damman troupe of three men and two young women. One of the women displayed astonishing muscular development, standing upright at perfect ease while holding on her shoulders two other members of the troupe. The finale of this act was quite thrilling, showing the two women whirling

Mr. Goodwin and Miss Elliott. It is seldom that the early part of the local theatrical season is signalized by such an important event as the visit of Nat C. Goodwin and Miss Maxine Elliott, representing as they do, a most unique and certainly the most artistic partnership in stage annals. The distinguished stars will present "When We Were Twenty-one" at English's next Thursday evening for but one performance with the same perfection of detail, the same scenic environment and the same splendidly balanced company that characterized the run of the play at the Knickerbocker Theater, New York, and which created such favorable comment in this city last season. It is within the limits of reasonable statement to aver that no play presented in the United States for many years has been the recipient of such unanimous commendation. Indeed it is an axiom that the professional authorities on stage art are never unanimous, but the exception, which proves the rule, has fallen to the lot of the Goodwins. The public has also been with the critics, for, successful as the Goodwins have been in the past, the success of "When We Were Twenty-one" far surpasses anything in their careers. From every standpoint the play has been praised -that of construction, of literature, of situation, of dramatic oportunities every member of a large cast, and above all for the healthy, old-fashioned sentiment that is the basic motive of the story It might be said that the engagement of Mr. Goodwin and Miss Elliott at English's last season is probably better remem than any other attraction, as they presented the same play they will give at English's next Thursday evening. The advance sale of seats will open at the box office to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock.

A Fine Continuous Animal Performance in Old Cyclorama.

The Bostock exhibit of trained wild animals was formally opened to the public last night and the immense arena in the Cyclorama building, which houses the group, was comfortably filled with people eager to inspect the animals and see the interesting exhibitions given by trainers, The place has been fitted up at considerable expense and rechristened the Zoc. Mr. and funny negro ditties. Walter Vaughan | Bostock, the propfletor, said last night that he intends to make Indianapolis headquarters for his great number of carnival shows, which in the aggregate employ hundreds of wild animals of a variety of species. At present there are said to be about twenty Bostock entertainments in different parts of the country. As rapidly as the Indianapolis public shows weariness of the groups of trained animals that are now quartered at the Zoo, Mr. Bostock will have them sent elsewhere and replaced by others which will exploit entirely new tricks. In this way he expects to make the Zoo a place of extraordinary attraction. He hopes that when its merit becomes generally known the place will be used as a sort of rendezvous for people living a distance from the center of the city who make frequent trips down town. Continuous performances will be given from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. each day, except Sunday. The interior of the Clcyorama has undergone a complete transformation in order to make it suitable for the purposes of a zoological garden. Cages have been built along the entire circumference of the building and above these cages extends a promenade from which excellent views may be had of events occurring on the floor below. Chairs are scattered at intervals along this promenade or balcony upon which visitors may rest while watching the exhibitions in the big circular cage beneath. An exceedingly interesting feature of the Zoo is the runway-hidden from the eyes of spectators-which surrounds all the cages in the rear. When the animals dwelling in a given cage are desired for performances in the central cage they are released from the back into the runway and driven along this until they come to the platform which connects the runway with the performing cage. This platform is, of course, securely barred on each side. The big iron inthrough their exhibitions is on an elevated stage, beneath which are the homes of many lions which are prevented by lack of space from being placed in a more advantageous location. A delightful air of the circus is given to the whole affair by

of a circus tent, which forms the roof of the building. The first thing that strikes a visitor's eyes upon entering the room is an open box containing the two much-discussed "bables," which are claimed to be the offspring of a tiger and a lioness. These interesting little animals were the recipents of much attention and fondling last night, all of which appeared greatly to their liking. There are baby lions in abundance in several of the cages, but these are of an older growth and unsafe to handle. Scattered about the room are also cages of birds, monkeys and dogs, the latter trained by Mme. Morelli's little girl to do many clever tricks. One cage contains a superb collection of parrots, cockatoos and parokeets of gorgeous plumage. Another cage contains a pair of pelicans, one of which is asserted to have been discov-

a gaily colored canopy, resembling the top ered on the Wednesday after the Galveston storm in the city of Ottumwa, Ia. Prof. Bonavita went through with his exhibition of seven trained lions last night, although he still carries his injured arm in a sling. Denver, the beast that caused the worst of Bonavita's wounds, was a little bad-tempered, but a liberal application of the club brought him to his senses. Mme. Morelli's display of educated jaguars is one of the star features of the entertain-The madame is a fine-looking French woman, and shows not the slightest fear of her apparently feroclous pets, go ing up to them with arms bared and wearing a lowcut gown. There is a tinge of peril about this part of the performance that makes it more than ordinarily attractive to visitors.

The feeding of the animals excited a creat deal of interest last night. This was lone by Mr. Bostock in person, and as he satisfied the hunger of each beast he related interesting stories in connection with its history. In order that some idea of the magnitude of the Zoo may be formed, a list of the occupants of the various cages s given as follows: Five lion cubs; boxing Kangaroo; Bengal tiger, "Bob;" grizziy bear; Honess and two cubs; three trained aguars; lioness Sultana; Alaskan wolf. black bear; lion and lioness; polar bear (sick and not expected to live); East Indian leopard; brown bear; African lions, three in number; three African lions; two trained black bears; four African lions; two wolves and two coyotes; leopardess and four cubs; one peccary; two African leopards; three lion cubs; one grizzly and one cinanmon bear; Wallace, the untam-able lion, and his mate; one Russian and one Canadian wolf; lion and lioness. Asiatic; one crocodile; two cages of monkys. These are exclusive of the itons beneath the great central cage and also exlusive of the exhibit of birds. For the children, and those of their elders who enjoy such things, there are a riding elehant, Roger, and two drome services as saddle animals may also be ad for a small fee. A diminutive pony art answers the wants of the little tots who visit the place. Mr. Bostock deserves to be sincerely congratulated upon having brought to this city a large attraction of real merit and undoubted novelty.

said it could not be said that Providence had anything to do with our getting the Philippines. Referring to a cablegram sent to Dewey the day after the protocol was signed asking him to send definite information about the islands and among other things something about their coal supply the orator remarked, stating that he did not want to be guilty of blasphemy: "Can you imagine Providence looking for coal in August in the Philippine islands?" Mr. Towne asserted that morally we have never secured a title to the Philippines. He said McKinley is of his own motion-for Congress has never declared war on the Filipinos-carrying on this war to take away from the people the land where they were born and for whose liberty they are willing to die. He declared that even if Spain had a right to sell, the American nation "under the light of God and with its past glorious history is incapable of buying The speaker gave out the warning that
